Product Description

Ductile Iron Unbonded Prestressing Post Tensioning Anchor Plate

Product Details

A post-tension anchor is a crucial component in post-tensioning systems, which are used to create prestress in concrete structures. The anchor plate, as a vital part of the anchor, plays a significant role in distributing stresses evenly across a broader area of concrete. By doing so, it minimizes the risk of localized stress concentrations, thereby enhancing the overall structural integrity and durability of the system. This ensures that the concrete structure can withstand loads more effectively and maintain its stability over time.

Application

Prestressed Anchor system is a completed, independent building measure researched, it has been widely adopted by modern construction, especially used in pre-tension or post-tension for concrete constructions as building materials, such as bridge construction, railway and highway construction, buildings and channel construction, etc.
